3 HURT WHEN SEDAN, TRUCK CRASH MONDAY

Hagerstown Man Is Charged With Reckless Driving After Accident.

BOTH MACHINES BADLY DAMAGED

Three Hagerstown men were injured and property damage in excess of $1,200 was caused when a sedan, driven by H. H. Shroder, 52, and a 5½-ton truck of the Harrisonburg motor express company, Harrisonburg, Virginia, collided on the Lincoln highway, seven miles east of here, at 11:45 o'clock, Monday evening.

Two of the injured, Shroder and Irvin Hoffman, 42, suffered severe lacerations of the head, face, chest and legs, and were admitted to the Warner hospital, although both were expected to be discharged today.

Harvey Kridler, 46, suffered minor cuts on both legs and nose.

Produce on Truck

The truck, loaded with a cargo of eggs, butter, cream and cheese, was being driven by I. W. Moore, of Harrisonburg, with Stanley Kline, also of Harrisonburg, as an assistant driver. The machine was enroute to Philadelphia with its cargo, valued in excess of $3,000.

Shroder, with his two companions, was returning to Hagerstown from York.

Both Moore and Kline told Patrolman R. E. Wenner, of the local substation of the state highway motor patrol, who was summoned, that they noticed the sedan zig-zagging on the highway as it approached the truck. More told the officer that he pulled to the extreme right side of the highway, and that the sedan crossed the dividing line in the middle of the highway.

$1,350 Damage
The touring car struck the truck about the middle of the body, causing damage estimated at $800 to $1,000. One crate of eggs was smashed by the impact. Damage to the sedan was estimated at $350. The frame of the truck was spread, the air brakes were torn out, one of the three axles of the truck was broken and the drive shaft was damaged. The front end of the sedan was wrecked.

Dan Hartman, proprietor of the Harrisonburg motor express company, was notified of the accident, and came to Gettysburg at once. He made arrangements to have another truck from York take the load of merchandise to Philadelphia.

Patrolman Wenner today laid an information against Shroder charging him with reckless driving. The information was laid before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer.

Deposed Police Chief Arrested

Lancaster, July 19.—Raymond F. Whitcomb, deposed chief of police, was arrested Monday and charged with extortion. He gave bail for a hearing before Justice of the Peace Herbert Steigerwalt.

Charges were brought by John Jack Kimes, former proprietor of the new Keystone hotel, who alleges he paid the former chief $400 protection money, while he was in office. Whitcomb was ousted in March, following disclosures of beer pipe lines in city sewers.

Kimes says he paid Whitcomb $80 a month protection money and recently he wrote a letter to the former chief demanding that the money be returned. The letter was ignored and the former hotel man brought the charge.

Kimes was arrested in September when city police raided his hotel, and on June 15 he completed his sentence for violating the liquor law.

Woman Leaps 12 Floors To Death

Philadelphia, July 19.—Leaping from a restroom window on the fourteenth floor of the Bankers Trust building, Miss Miriam Bochrach, 69, was killed Monday.

Several pedestrians and employees of nearby buildings saw the woman's body hurtle through the air and land on a metal ventilator on the second-story roof of a building adjoining.

Following a conference with Clinton O. Mayer, an attorney, on the thirteenth floor, Miss Bochrach obtained a key to the restroom on the floor above. A few minutes later she jumped from the window.

NEED FUNDS TO CONTINUE DRIVE AGAINST PESTS

Councilman C. W. Epley Says Mosquito-Eradication Money Is Exhausted.

TO END WORK THIS EVENING

Mosquito-eradication work under the direction of Councilman C. W. Epley will end on Thursday unless additional contributions from local residents are received. This was announced today by Mr. Epley, who said that only $15 remains toward purchasing materials and hiring men for the work now in progress.

Eighteen men today were engaged in cleaning out a channel in Rock Creek near the York street bridge; four others were cleaning up the Tiber and two additional hands were spraying oil. Most of the men employed by Mr. Epley are local unemployed married men, some of whom have not had work for several months.

All Kerosene Used
Of the 3,000 gallons of kerosene which Mr. Epley purchased to spray on mosquito-infested spots along Rock Creek, the Tiber and other small streams in Gettysburg and vicinity, only 220 gallons remained at noon today, and this will be exhausted before evening.

Mr. Epley estimated that $50 additional will be necessary to carry the mosquito war to a successful conclusion. So far contributions of local public-spirited residents have totaled $130.94. That the work has been marked with noticeable results is the consensus of Gettysburgians who have commented upon the fact that there are fewer mosquitoes in Gettysburg this summer than ever before.

Recent contributions to the fund were received from District Attorney John P. Butt, $250; Hammaker Brothers, an additional contribution of $2; Mrs. J. T. Fogle, $1; J. Elmer Musselman, $1; Miss Maude Miller, $1; C. W. Ogden, $1, and J. I. Burgoon, $1.

Death Toll in Heat Wave Gains

(By the A. P.)
A dozen additional deaths from heat and drowning left an irate sun unappeased yesterday.

Warmer weather for most of the area east of the Rockies was forecast although some relief was in store for sections of the south and west.

Two heat deaths and a drowning at Alva, Oklahoma, were the southwest victims to a heat which reached a maximum of 110 at Phoenix, Arizona, and touched 108 at Altus, Oklahoma.

Numerous communities in this region sizzled under temperatures of 100 degrees or more but thunderstorms cooled Texas somewhat.

Iowa, Wisconsin, South Dakota and Nebraska likewise sweltered with the mercury around the 100 mark and reported five deaths. Indiana and Kentucky also reported fatalities. Those in the Blue Grass state where the weather was milder were by drowning. Further east the weather was more seasonable with New York enjoying a comfortable 81.

Capones Planning to Purchase 101 Ranch, Guthrie Paper Says

Guthrie, Okla., July 19 (AP).—The Guthrie Daily Leader says in a story signed by its editor, Raymond Fields, that the famous 101 Ranch, near Ponca City, is about to be sold to Al Capone, imprisoned gang lord, his brother Ralph and allied interests.

Zack Miller, last survivor of the ranch founders, will go to St. Louis and Atlanta with E. E. Beach and Horace J. Smith, of Pawhuska, the Leader says, to arrange details of the transaction.

Louis (Diamond Jack) Alterie, Chicago gangster, who turned dude rancher in Colorado, was named as representing the Capones and was said to have conferred with the receiver for the ranch.

"The Capone boys are quitting the racket and are going to retire to active management of the ranch if the final purchase is made," Smith was quoted as saying.

"They will bring to the 17,000 acres a large group of Italian farmers who will divide the holdings into tracts of forty and eighty acres and carry on intensive farming.

CHINCH BUGS INFEST COUNTY

Heidlersburg, Table Rock And Mummasburg Sections Affected.

An infestation of chinch bugs has appeared in the Heidlersburg, Table Rock and Mummasburg section of Adams county, M. T. Hartman, farm agent, said today. The bugs, about one-fifth of an inch long, with black bodies, have been found prevalent in corn fields. Young chinch bugs are yellowish or bright red, turning darker as they grow older.

During the winter the bugs hibernate in clumps of grass, in corn butts and whatever rubbish is available.

In early spring they assemble in fields of grass and small grains later going to corn fields. Although the bugs have wings they travel by foot and were it not for this fact it would be difficult to cope with their migration.

Control measures consist chiefly of keeping the bugs from spreading. A deep furrow plowed that the loose ground will be thrown toward the infested area and the straight edge of the furrow will prove difficult for the bugs to get out.

Any material available that will prevent the bugs from crossing the ditch will be helpful.

In the fall when the grass has become sufficiently dry the burning over of grass land, fence rows, hedges and roads is of prime importance to destroy the bugs.

HURT IN FALL

Mary Ellen Fissel, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fissel, North Franklin street, suffered concussion of the head and lacerations of the head and back when she fell from an eight-foot wall at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fissel, Orntanna, on Monday.

MONEY ORDER POSTAL FEES ARE INCREASED

Rates Raised One Cent On Each Of First Four Classifications.

NEW FEE BRINGS LARGER RETURNS

Uncle Sam has introduced another increase in postal charges, effective Wednesday, in an attempt to drag the post office department "out of the red," according to an announcement this morning by Postmaster John Eckert.

The new increase affects the first four classifications on money orders. The new schedule increases the fee for postal money orders in each of first four classes, by one cent as follows:

$1.00 to $2.00 six cents instead of five.

$2.50 to $5.00 eight cents instead of seven.

$5.00 to $10.00 eleven cents instead of ten.

$10.00 to $20.00 thirteen cents instead of twelve.

The postal fee on all money orders over $20.00 remains unchanged, Mr. Eckert announced.

Receipts Increase
The local postmaster said that there was a noticeable increase in the receipts since the inception of the recent increase in first class mail from two to three cents.

"Contrary to expectations," Postmaster Eckert said, "we have not found an increase in the number of post cards mailed out of the Gettysburg office. It was expected that since the government did not increase the post card mailing charge, one cent per card, that a great number of people would resort to this form of correspondence.

"On the contrary we have not found an increase in the number of post cards and our first class letter mail has not decreased. The average number of pieces of first class mail out of the Gettysburg office is unchanged from prior to the increase in postal charges, July 6," Mr. Eckert said.

Butzer was committed to jail in default of bond for the next term of court.

Butzer's difficulties were revealed several weeks ago after he had been relieved of the superintendency of the silk company. At that time he admitted to the Friendship authorities that he had used certain funds of said company. He is charged with embezzling $869.94 of a fund which, it is said, was placed in the saving fund of the Friendship company.

The Friendship company has started proceedings to recover on the bond.

CURTIS FREED ON $10,000 BAIL

Surprise Move Gives Norfolk Man His Freedom In Hoax Case.

Flemington, N. J., July 19 (AP).—Lloyd Fisher, attorney, announced today he would apply immediately for an order to show cause why the verdict of guilty against John H. Curtis, who was convicted of hindering the capture of the Lindbergh baby kidnappers, should not be set aside.

He said he would charge in his application that Prosecutor Houck had been guilty of contempt by permitting detectives to follow the jury.

Flemington, N. J., July 19 (AP).—Released in bail, John Hughes Curtis, Lindbergh case hoaxer, was free of his jail cell Monday night for the first time since his arrest in May. He was believed on his way to his home in Norfolk, Virginia.

The shipbuilder, who was sentenced last Monday to a year in prison and a $1000 fine for hindering capture of the Lindbergh baby kidnappers, was elated at his freedom.

He was admitted to bail of $10,000 after a secret hearing before Judge Robbins, who sat at the trial and passed sentence.

Then he slipped out the rear door of the Hunterdon county court house and sped away by automobile. With him were George Kaplan, Newark agent for a surety company, and three other men.

Bail Move Surprise The bail move was a surprise to Prosecutor Houck, who said earlier he thought Curtis had decided not to appeal his case, as a week had passed since the sentence without any action.

In an interview in his cell only an hour before he gained his freedom, Curtis appeared jubilant, but only shrugged when asked the cause and kept his secret.

The bail bond signed by the Court is returnable October 3 in supreme court.

Babe Ruth To Be In Line-up Soon

New York, July 19 (AP).—George Herman (Babe) Ruth, the great man of the Yankees, who tore a muscle in his right leg in yesterday's game with the Chicago White Sox, should be back in the lineup by Saturday in the opinion of his trainer, Artie McGovern.

"It's just a 'charlie-horse'," McGovern explained after he massaged the Babe's aching leg.

STAGE PLAY MAY BE NEW LLOYD FILM

By Robbin Coons Hollywood—Howard Hughes' reported retirement from independent production proved, when the young producer reappeared after the Fourth of July week-end vacation, to have sprung from two other fellows or something.

For Hughes, idle now, says he will resume production this autumn or by the first of the year, making either "Zeppelin Z-27" or the frequently postponed "Queer People," his first new picture.

It will be something new under this California sun if Harold Lloyd really undertakes the filming of "Whistling In The Dark."

Lloyd Likes Surprises Joseph Schenck owns screen rights to this play, and has broached it to the comedian as a worthy vehicle.

Before he saw it, he didn't care for the idea. Lloyd's comedies depend so much on the element of surprise that a plot which has been revealed, even on the stages of a few cities, is in his mind as flat as yesterday's near-beer.

Right In Step

But the story of "Whistling In The Dark," built around a crime fiction writer involved with gangsters, very hilariously, he deems strong enough to stand on its own.

If the gangster background is maintained, Lloyd will be right in step with a trend toward satirizing gangland for comic purposes.

Aristocrats, With Hitler's Approval, In Control Of Government.

By Walter Brookmann

Berlin (AP).—With the government in the hands of avowed rightists most of whom are aristocrats, and Hitler's Nazis expressing their approval, the ghost of Hohenzollernism again stalks the German stage.

The peremptory dissolution of the reichstag, rumors of an impending change in the republican constitution and of the appointment of a commissioner with dictatorial powers over Prussia, make republicans apprehensive that the rightists are preparing the way for a monarchy.

And the rightists—the nationalists and the nazis—are now a potent force. Riddin gon the wave of nationalism they have an excellent chance for increasing their following in the reichstag election of July 31.

The rumor factories have it, despite authoritative denials, that President von Hindenburg will resign on his 85th birthday next October and recommend that the former crown prince, Friedrich Wilhelm, assume temporary administration of Germany.

The timid element among the republicans fears just such a development. They discount or ignore all rightists and point out that the rightists possess many facilities for preparing public opinion to accept such a step.

Watch Holland Parleys The reported trip of the ex-crown prince to Holland to visit his father and reports that this followed a consultation at Doorn between the ex-emperor and General Franz von Epp, leader of the Bavarian nazis, caused audible moans of apprehension in left and centrist circles.

Moreover, the have constantly in mind the plain talk by Adolf Hitler, chief of Germany's largest party.

His persistent attacks on the "November system" republic, his appeals for a return of the old Prussian spirit, his outspoken eulogies of the Hohenzollerns, never once have raised a hoot or a jeer from the millions who have heard him.

The last session of the Prussian diet heard a vivid eulogy of the Hohenzollerns by the nazil floor-leader, Wilhelm Kube.

Attacking a communist motion to abolish the pensions and damages paid to former royalty, he said:

"We national socialists honor the great past of our people and nation. Without the Hohenzollerns, without Frederick the Great, without Wilhelm I, not a single one of you in the opposition would be sitting here."

Claim Workers' Support "If you've no further complaint to bring against our comrade Prince August Wilhelm except that he is a Hohenzollern, let me remind you that not Braun or Severing (republican ministers of Prussia) but the Hohenzollerns made Prussian history!"

"None of you can deny that the biggest part of the working class would rather march shoulder to shoulder with a Hohenzollern than with a Jewish profiteer."

"And when the November republicans have to get out of Prussia, there will be an exodus which will make the flight of the children of Israel look like child's play!"

New York—I held a match for the other two smokers at our table in a neat little restaurant in West Forty-seventh street, where most of the patrons are vaudevillians. Then I nearly touched the same match to my own cigaret—a gesture that defies the pet superstition of many persons who don't share all the credulity of stage folk.

Fritz Hubert, young red haired comic, almost swept the dishes off the table in an effort to stop me.

"Not three on one match, please," he pleaded.

"Just like an actor," spoofed our check-paying friend.

"Sure, I'm superstitious," Fritz readily admitted. "More than ever, right now. I'm going back on my jinx stage in a few days, and I don't want any more hard luck."

Hubert recalled his two tough breaks within a year on the boards of a Broadway vaudeville house.

Jinx Takes An Encore The performer from Puyallup, Washington, is teamed in his comedy act with his sister, Jean Hubert. They have some goofy business illustrating the after-effects of too much cork smelling, and Fritz takes some nasty falls all over the stage.

They were in their glory July 4, a year ago, at last in the big house, the goal of all vaudevillians. Fritz was working his hardest. He took an elaborate lunge, kicked against the proscenium wall and broke his ankle.

A few weeks ago they were back there again. Both determined to work their heads off, but Fritz, poor fellow, nearly knocked his left eye, use a back drop of light fabric. Fritz surged against that drop. Stage hands had left a grand piano too close behind it. As Fritz fell he struck his right temple against the piano. That was the last he knew until the doctors were through taking ten stitches.

That dive of Fritz's was the usual cue for Jean to strike a silly pose with her back to him, and stay that way until her brother yelled to her from the floor. She struck her pose and waited—and waited. No yell. She spoke his name under her breath. No response. So, keeping in character, she staggered over to where he lay. Blood was flowing from Fritz's head.

It was her trouper's instinct to carry off the scene without arousing the audience to alarm. Clowning all the while, she pulled the light drape forward, over Fritz's body. Then, as the orchestra blared "T Got Rhythm," she reeled to the wings. The audience laughed.

So you see Fritz Hubert doesn't want to have three cigarettes lighted off one match, or walk under a ladder, or have a black cat cross his path.

FOUR COPS HELD IN N. Y. DEATH

Police Conduct Investigation Into Alleged Slaying Of Prisoner.

New York, July 19 (AP).—Four Long Island policemen were ordered held incommunicado Monday night as material witnesses in the "third degree" death of Hyman Stark, reputed assailant of an aged woman, after the woman's detective-son had been named as the man who struck Stark.

Detective Leslie Pearsall testified he had been guarding Stark in the police rifle room when Detective Joseph Hizenski rushed in, grabbed the prisoner by the throat and hit him once or twice in the mouth.

"You killed my mother," Hizenski was quoted as shouting at Stark. (Mrs. Valeria Hizenski, at first believed critically wounded, is now recovering).

Pearsall said that after he pulled Hizenski away from the prisoner and pushed him from the room, Stark grabbed for his throat and said:

"I don't feel well."

Earlier in the session of a John Doe proceeding, ordered to fix responsibility for the death, the coroner had testified that Stark died from a broken Adam's apple.

District Attorney Elvin Edwards had openly predicted that the Nassau county officers would attempt to make Detective Hizenski "take the rap" for Stark's death, "because they figure a jury would not convict him for attacking his mother's assailant."

When Pearsall had concluded his story, Edwards asked:

"Would it interest you to know that Hizenski told me this morning that all this occurred at the sixth precinct station and not at headquarters, as you say?"

"I can't help what he says," the witness answered.

"How do you account for the more than fifty welts on Stark's body made by the rubber hose with which he was beaten?"

"I don't know," Pearsall responded.

Other officers held are Detective Charles Wesser, who testified he had seen Stark lying unconscious and stripped to the waist on the floor of police headquarters. Officer Harold Breitenbeck, who told of seeing the prisoner sitting in the rifle room, semi-conscious and with his clothing partly off, and Detective Harry Zander, who told virtually the same story as Pearsall.

All were placed in the custody of the sheriff.

STRANGERS ARE WELCOME IN N. Y.

Big City Is Friendlier Than Many Old Home Towns.

By William Gaines New York—The notion persists that New Yorkers in general are impersonal and cold, if not actually unfriendly; that the city turns a freezing shoulder to the newcomer; that cries for help are apt to fall on deaf ears.

The generalization doesn't hold up in most cases I can think of.

Many who are here must admit that, broadly speaking, New York is a friendlier city than some of the old home towns.

As we remember some of these towns—if we are frank—we probably will admit that if we had the choice of being strangers or down-and-outers there or here, we would choose New York as the quickest place to catch on and the surest place to survive.

If we had a budding talent and wanted to try it out—well, there's just no argument. It would have to be New York.

Most of New Yorkers who are assembled here were New Yorkers before they came. For, after all, New York is a state of mind—a state of mind that demands certain liberties as well as opportunities.

The seeming unfriendliness, or coldness, of the city is the guarantee of the liberties sought out. People don't bother about you here unless you want them to. You can come and go as you please, do as you want. But if you want notice, assistance, protection and can't get it when you ask for it, then your case is unusual.

Friendly City Fair consideration must make it at once apparent that the whole development of New York is based upon its acceptance of the stranger for what he is worth, whether he comes into the melting pot from a far country or from Idaho or Georgia.

If you've got anything to sell, and can't sell it in New York, there must be something wrong with it. For everything from Brooklyn bridge to quill toothpicks has been sold here and the market here is relatively better right now than anywhere else.

Every season the whole town thrills to the discovery of new talent in the arts. The dramatic critics always have an eye peeled for some stranger with an improved grinace or a neater ankle. The art commentators literally excavate among the mass of offerings for something of genuine promise.

If the stranger wants company in New York, there are thousands of others who want company, too. And hundreds of places where and ways how they may get together.

When the hat is passed here to help the needy, the response usually is a greater than it is anywhere else on earth. And quicker.

A Sense Of Humor New York as a whole has a hearty tolerance and a grand sense of humor. In competitive circles there is plenty of throat-cutting and back-biting, of course, but I remember the same situation back home.

Any town where the schedule of an entire elevated railway line is held up, at an hour when the masses of people are on their way to work—and where everybody is good natured about the delay—because a loose pup is loping along the rails in front of a train and an engineer won't run him down—

Any such town as that isn't a cold and harsh town. And it isn't too much in a hurry to be humane.

The Faithful Cheat

BY RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS: "Marry me before I go," Mark Merriman says to Sondra Kent as he prepares to go away for years of work in the Congo. Sondra is more ready to agree than she ever has been before. She has determined not to marry Mark, because of his poverty, since she has been trained to make a wealthy marriage. She even has asked John Anderson to give Mark the position, but now she dreads the separation. The nearness of Mark's departure leads them to tell each other of their mutual love, and Sondra's unhappiness at the shortness of time left to them leads to Mark's proposal. In her disturbance, Sondra gives no thought of John Anderson, who loves her though he is bound to an unhappy marriage. She forgets, too, her practical decision, that she should not marry Mark because his future is so uncertain.

Chapter 8

ONE REMAINING HOUR

Sondra put on her hat, and mechanically arranged a little curl of hair over each ear beneath the narrow brim, before she turned away from the mirror.

Mark's wrist-watch, lying on the dressing-table, together with his cigarette case and other odds and ends, showed that it was nearly ten o'clock, and the boat went in an hour.

In the little dressing room adjoining she could hear Mark moving about, ramming forgotten things into his suit-case.

Only one hour left—one little hour that might be all they would spend together for the rest of their lives.

Sondra looked round the room with blank eyes.

Yesterday morning she and Mark had been married, and this morning they were to part—perhaps for ever.

The last 24 hours seemed like a dream—the hurried arrangements, the casual excuse to Flora about going to spend the night with some friends out of town—the unromantic ceremony at city hall—a few hours' happiness, and now—this.

She looked curiously at her bare left hand from which a few moments ago Mark had taken the wedding ring and kissed it, before he watched her put it safely away out of sight of an inquisitive world. Married! She was no longer Sondra Kent—she was Mark Merriman's wife, a fact which was to be kept jealously guarded until Mark came home again.

They had both agreed upon that; it had seemed the wisest plan. It was nobody's business but their own.

Presently—in one short hour—she would go back to Flora's pretentious, unfriendly house as if nothing had happened, and Mark would be rushing away on the liner. Mark came back into the room. He had stopped whistling, and there was a hard, strained look about his face.

"I've told them to send for a taxi," he said; he avoided looking at Sondra.

After a moment he went on: "The time will soon pass. It's amazing how quickly the time passes. . . I shall write every mail. . . Where the devil is my pipe?" "On the mantelpiece," Sondra said.

"Oh, yes," he took it up, and thrust it into a jacket pocket, giving a last look around the room. His eyes came back to his wife.

"I suppose we ought to go."

"Yes." He came across the room to her. "You're not sorry?" he asked hoarsely, "about—everything?" She shook her head dumbly.

He put his hands on her shoulders.

"It's been so wonderful, Sondra." She made a swift movement towards him, hiding her face against his coat and his arms closed round her.

He said in a rough, shaken voice, "You'll take care of yourself, won't you, my darling?—and write to me often. I'm glad you'll be all right—about money, I mean."

"Yes." Even in that moment of tragedy it seemed strange to Sondra that Mark should always so quietly have assumed that she was well off—Flora's reflected glory, she supposed.

He went on disjointedly. "I shall send you every penny I can spare." He stopped again, only to break out with a note of agony in his voice. "Don't forget me, Sondra. . ."

She clung to him, weeping now. "Don't go, Mark—don't leave me. . . oh, don't go."

He tried to laugh, lifting her face to his. "My darling, you know I must. But it won't be for very long—somehow, in spite of everything, I believe we shall soon be together again. Oh, Sondra, don't cry, I can't bear it."

"And if I find I can't live without you, Mark?"

"Then you must come to me."

She tried hard to control herself. "Yes. . . I know. . . I shall be all right. . . It's just saying goodbye—I meant to be so brave, and now. . ."

"It's not goodbye—I won't let you say that word. . ."

He took her face between his hands, and looked long into her eyes.

"Say you love me."

"I love you."

"And I love you—with all that I am—and ever shall be."

He kissed her many times, on her eyes, her hair, and her throat, and then once in a long kiss on her quivering lips.

"For a little while, my sweet."

He let her go at last, and turned resolutely away as someone knocked at the door. "Your taxi, sir."

"Coming."

Sondra was bathing her eyes, trying to check her sobbing.

Mark lit a cigarette and puffed at it fiercely.

"I suppose I mustn't kiss you at the boat?"

"Is someone c-coming to s-see you off?"

"One or two people I expect. Not mother—she promised she wouldn't. I expect Anderson will be there."

"Oh."

"We must go, my darling," Mark said very gently.

"I'm ready."

He caught her in his arms as she turned to the door.

"God bless you—my best beloved."

She dared not answer, could not trust herself to look at him, and together they went downstairs to the waiting taxicab.

It was such a short way to the pier. Sondra held Mark's hand tightly, her lips resolutely pressed.

"I shall write to you from every port. I'll cable, too," Mark said.

"You mustn't be too extravagant."

"You'll always love me—faithfully, Sondra?"

With an effort she controlled her trembling lips.

"And you, Mark?"

"Always."

The taxi stopped.

Sondra stood on the curb while Mark paid the driver.

"It's just a dream, that's all," she kept telling herself resolutely.

They went on the boat and found Mark's stateroom.

Several men friends of Mark's joined them on deck.

Mark stood at the rail, smoking hard and talking ceaselessly.

"I suppose you'll be dancing to-night," he said ruefully. "While I shall be tossing on the waves."

Someone asked, "Isn't Anderson here?" and it was Sondra who answered. "He was not sure if he could come."

Already there were signs of departure—last goodbyes and kisses.

"I simply must see what your stateroom is like," Sondra said.

She hurried away from the group. In a moment he followed her, as she intended that he should.

"I can't bear it, Mark—"

"It won't be for long—somehow I'm sure it won't be for very long, my darling."

"If only I were going with you!"

The warning call sounded through the sunshine outside.

Mark's tall figure almost blocked up the doorway, and nobody saw when he took his wife in his arms for a last kiss.

"God bless you—for ever and ever. . ."

She was on deck again, smiling heroically, laughing a little hysterically.

"Wouldn't it be fun if we were all going? It's so dull. . . being left behind. . ."

A tall man pushed his way through the crowd.

"Goodbye, Merriman!" It was John Anderson.

The two men gripped hands.

"Good-bye, and the best of luck."

"Goodbye, sir, and a thousand thanks."

"Goodbye. . . goodbye. . ."

Slowly, the ship started to move. Mark's eyes were on Sondra's face to the last moment, till the boat slipped down the river and he was lost to sight, and even then Sondra stood where she was, staring blankly after it.

There seemed no sense in moving away—where in the whole of the great empty city could she go?

(Copyright, 1932, by Ruby M. Ayres)

Sondra wonders, tomorrow, whether her marriage has changed her or whether Anderson's attitude toward her is different.

How To End Two-Thirds Rule Still A Puzzle To Democrats

By Byron Price
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Another democratic national convention has concluded under the tradition of the two-thirds rule.

For a full hundred years that requirement has held its grip on party conventions, sometimes creating factional strife that historians have held chargeable with lost opportunities to seize control of the national government.

But for that rule, no grueling session such as marked the taking in Chicago of that first ballot—cast as sun streamers pointed through the eastern windows long golden fingers of amazement at the ways of a democracy—would have been necessary.

The succession of nominating speeches and demonstrations for a half score of candidates would never have been.

Wasted Oratory

Those speeches swayed no vote then, nor in any previous convention living men can recall. They only wore on the already fagged nerves of those present. They increased the danger of such factional conflict as might destroy party solidarity in the elections to follow and they are an inescapable form of the two-thirds rule.

Yet how to get rid of that rule? The Chicago convention, to be sure, advised that the next convention rid itself of this century old incubus on majority control. It could do no more than that.

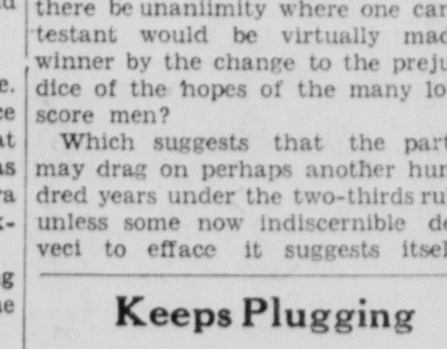

Changing Rules

There is much force in the cry that it is unsportsmanlike to seek a change of the rules in any contest after the struggle has begun. The Roosevelt leaders who launched that Chicago drive on the two-thirds rule found that out.

Only by unanimous consent could that have been done, and how could there be unanimity where one contestant would be virtually made winner by the change to the prejudice of the hopes of the many low score men?

Which suggests that the party may drag on perhaps another hundred years under the two-thirds rule unless some now indiscernible device to efface it suggests itself.

Keeps Plugging

Sondra wonders, tomorrow, whether her marriage has changed her or whether Anderson's attitude toward her is different.

FIVE ARRESTED AFTER ASSAULT

Hagerstown. — Officer Russell Lanehart, of Hancock, was severely beaten Saturday night in a free-for-all fight at Hancock, in which five men participated. Several stitches were required to close wounds in the officer's head and he was badly cut and bruised about the body.

According to information secured by Constable Charles A. Barnhart, who assisted in subduing the men, William Dugan, about 30, of Hancock, accosted Lanehart in front of the Western Maryland station there.

Henry O'Malley, commissioner of the bureau of fisheries now in Alaska for the summer, reported the salmon run in the Chignik river as the largest in history.

Blasts Love Legend

The Rev. E. T. Dahlberg of St. Paul, defining the difference between "true love" and infatuation, said that if Romeo and Juliet had not died they would have separated and spoiled history's prize love legend.

One word led to another and finally a fight began.

Four other men, Vernon Hiles, Raymond Weaver, Hollis True and John Dyer, are alleged to have joined in the scrap, which started about 11 o'clock. Constable Barnhart answered a call for help and finally the men were subdued.

MATRON NAMED FOR NEW HOME

Hagerstown.—The appointment of Mrs. Sallie Haines as matron of the Old Folks' home, being established by the Reformed synod in Virginia avenue was announced Saturday by the board of trustees. It was also announced that the home will be ready by September 1.

Improvements are now being made to the property which was formerly the August Ludwig residence. Besides a large brick dwelling with outbuildings the property consists of about four acres of land.

WINNERS IN CONTEST TO BE ANNOUNCED

Hagerstown.—The names of the four successful and youthful winners in the essay contest on George Washington, sponsored by the Washington county farm bureau, will be announced on Thursday evening, July 28, at the public celebration in memory of George Washington, the farmer, held by the bureau in Beaver Creek community hall at 7:30 p. m.

The contest was started in the spring and aroused much interest with a number of young men entering from the three agricultural high schools in the county which are Smithsburg, Boonsboro and Hancock. They will be awarded $25.00 in gold, with the prizes as follows: $10.00, $7.50, $5.00 and $2.50. The contest has created much interest in Washington as a farmer.

Henry O'Malley, commissioner of the bureau of fisheries now in Alaska for the summer, reported the salmon run in the Chignik river as the largest in history.

EARTH SPINS TOWARD STAR

World Travels 700,000 Miles An Hour Toward Constellation Cepheus.

By Robert H. Baker

(Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois)

Urbana, Ill. (AP)—Anyone who drives his car at the rate of a hundred miles an hour is likely to tell his friends about it. Yet this is very slow going compared with the speed with which the earth is taking us through space.

Consider the earth's rotation: It is whirling us around toward the east at the rate of 1,040 miles an hour at the equator.

The speed is reduced to 800 miles an hour at New York. Fortunately the air whirls around with us. If it were not so, there would be a continual east wind more violent than the severest tornado.

Then, too, the earth is taking us around the sun at the rate of 65,000 miles an hour. If there were telegraph poles along the great curved track of the earth, they would fly past amazingly fast. But all the objects in the celestial scenery are far away, except the moon which goes with us in this journey around the sun.

Finally, we are flying at the rate of 700,000 miles an hour toward the constellation Cepheus. This constellation can be found in the northern sky, to the right of the pole star in the early evening in July. Some people imagine that its principal stars outline a steeple, lying on its side at this season with the point toward the pole star.

In this rapid journey toward Cepheus we have plenty of celestial company. All the stars around us are moving this way also. It is believed that we are taking part in the rotation of the vast system of the Milky Way around its center in the star cloud of Sagittarius 50,000 light years away.

This great star cloud is now visible in the southeast in the early evening, and low in the south at midnight. It is the brightest and most spectacular part of the fine region of the Milky Way that we see in summer.

But the earth does not hold the record for high speed. Recent observations at the Mount Wilson Observatory appear to show that some of the remote spirals far beyond the Milky Way are speeding away from us at the rate of 25,000,000 miles an hour.

An Evening Thought

When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.—Burke.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Local Items: Prof. S. B. Heiger, of Shippensburg, has been elected principal of the normal school at Shippensburg.

Last week Drs. Stark and Baugher had a tramp through the mountains, visiting Mary's Hill, Pen-Mar and other out-looks.

Father Boll, having completed his European tour, is turning his face homeward. Writing from Berlin, he says he expects to sail from Queenstown for New York July 20 on the "City of Rome."

The artesian well at the Gettysburg packing establishment is a success—an abundance of water at a depth of 80 feet. Mr. Miller will bore next at the Gettysburg foundry.

The Athenaeum boys are in camp this week at Dicks, on the Conowingo. They will break camp on Friday. The Sioux will leave for Cambridge, Maryland, on the 31st inst.

Frederick Winand, of Latimore township, fell from the roof of Hiram Junkin's barn, which he was patching on Thursday. He was picked up unconscious, but sustained no vital injuries.

Dr. Moriarty, veterinary surgeon, has succeeded in permanently curing a bad case of stringhalt in a valuable mare owned by J. T. Brown, of Butler. As this is the first case of the kind known to be cured, it is well worthy of mention. The doctor also performed one of the most difficult operations on an animal owned by James Hersh, a few weeks ago and saved her life.

R. A. Lytle, our Arendtsville correspondent, has been to Philadelphia to consult an oculist. He expects to be relieved, but has orders to give his eyes absolute rest during the summer, refraining from unnecessary reading or writing.

Marriages: Flowers—George, July 10, at the residence of the bride's father at Amite City, Louisiana, by the Rev. R. J. Stewart, Hiland Flowers, of New Orleans, formerly of Gettysburg, to Callie A. George, daughter of the Rev. Elias George. No cards.

Mauk—Walker. April 30, at Harrisburg, by the Rev. George M. Hoke, Thomas M. Mauk, of Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, to Miss Lou Walker, of Bendersville, Pennsylvania.

Wolf—Spangler. July 11, in Franklinton, by the Rev. J. O. Clippinger, J. F. Wolf to Miss Ida V. Spangler, both of Adams county.

The wheat harvest has closed in this county. We hear only favorable reports, both as to yield and quality. The yield will probably be above the average, and far beyond the expectations last spring. The grass yield is also larger, probably double that of last year. Corn is growing nicely, and unless a dry spell should set in a good yield may be expected. There will be an abundance of early potatoes. The general outlook ought to be satisfactory to the farmer.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber.

Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper: the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand.

The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul.

The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.

Psalm 121.

Mrs. Lincoln, wife of the late president, died at Springfield, Illinois, Sunday evening, of paralysis. She had been in bad health for a long time. Her maiden name was Mary Todd, a daughter of Hon. Robert Todd, of Lexington, Kentucky, and she met Abraham Lincoln at Springfield during a visit to a married sister residing there. She married Mr. Lincoln November 4, 1842. She had the reputation of being a very ambitious woman, of rare talents, and a good deal of temper, which at times involved both husband and herself in difficulty. On the assassination of her husband, her mind lost its balance and she passed some time in private asylums. She visited Europe a few years ago for her health but was not benefited. Recently congress voted her a pension of $5,000 a year.

The G. A. R. encampment will open on Saturday next. Special trains will bring visitors from the northern and eastern parts of the state. The encampment will probably be the largest ever held here. Some of the posts will bring with them commissariat departments and do their own cooking. Others will secure boarding in town at hotels and private boarding houses.

Fairfield Items: Mrs. James Scott, of Washington city, is here on a visit, the guest of Mrs. J. W. Kittinger.

J. W. Sullivan and family, formerly of this place, but now of Monrovia, Maryland, spent a few days here with his father and sister.

E. T. Rinehart and little son, of Baltimore, spent Sunday with his brother-in-law, A. Marshall.

D. R. Musselman and Ephraim Swope were out gunning one day last week for woodcock. They became separated and Mr. Swope fired his gun at a bird, the contents of which struck D. R. Musselman, putting about twenty-five shot in his person. Dr. A. T. Beaver was called in and removed the shot. Mr. M. is about again, but has not much use of his one arm.

Miss Edith Rogers is visiting her brother, W. C. Rogers, and family, of this place.

Mrs. M. M. Shields and Mrs. Mary Riley have gone on a visit to Lancaster county.

Mr. Joseph Musselman sowed four bushels of rye last fall which yielded 100 bushels.

The 'Pennsylvania College Monthly' for July is a semi-centennial number almost exclusively devoted to the semi-centennial of the college. It contains 104 pages, and gives a full report of the exercises. Prof. Bikle, the editor of the monthly, deserves great credit for getting up, at his own expense, this memorial volume. But a few copies of the edition remain, and those who wish to secure them must apply at once—25 cents each. For sale at Buehler's bookstore.

Current News and Notes: Labor troubles and strikes seem to be growing over the country.

Drowning at seaside resorts and bathing places are now the order of the day.

Nelle Grant Sartoris celebrated her twenty-seventh birthday on the Fourth of July at Idlewild, on Green bay, Wisconsin, where she has been for some time with her husband. She partakes of her husband's love for fishing and proved herself an adept as a rifle and pistol shot.

Housepainting More Important Than Olympics

Stockholm (AP).—While the other members of the Swedish Olympics team are on their way to Los Angeles, ready to compete in the interests of Swedish athletic fame, Erik Lundkvist, the greatest javelin thrower this nation has produced, continues to paint houses for a living and throw the javelin for exercise.

Lundkvist's refusal to go to Los Angeles, after making the best showing in his event at the Olympic try-outs here, is an interesting commentary on amateur athletics.

The Swedish house painter declined, for economic reasons, to make the trip. He has known the sting of unemployment, and the momentary value of fame.

He went to Amsterdam in 1923 and set a record in the javelin throw. When he returned he became ill, and he was out of work for some time. He became a forgotten hero.

Lundkvist, now 23 years old, is one of five grown members of a family living in a province in central Sweden. The father has irregular employment. The Swedish javelin thrower has a feeling of economic obligation, therefore, which overshadows his love of athletics. This spring he secured a job as a house painter, and he was unwilling to leave it when asked to compete at Los Angeles.

Left behind, a victim of a strict rules of Swedish amateur athletics, which tolerate not the slightest show of subsidy, the powerful, black-haired Lundkvist throws his javelin on a grassy plot, with the people of his community for an audience.

When he hears of the javelin record at Los Angeles, he may, in all likelihood, go to his grassy field, make a supreme effort, and set a record as good or better.

Earl Clary, sensational halfback of the South Carolina 1931 eleven, will call signals next fall.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BACK IN "WESKAWENAAK"

INCREASINGLY I look forward to the days of summertime, when the little islands call, and the music of their pines and hemlocks, the odor of their trunks and branches, and the pungent smell of the wild earth, all help so to bury the sorrows and problems of the rest of the year.

We are back in "Weskawenak" our Nova Scotia home. Simply and happily do we live here. And to this place have we carried a few of our closest book friends and companions. And a few new ones have been included that we may return to our work, a little richer in mind.

In the lagoon, before our lodge, we discovered some new friends in a mother blue wing duck and her little brood of five. So well acquainted have we become that now we stand a few feet from them as we feed them bits of bread and grain. Originally there were a dozen or so in the little family—but the cruel and wily hawks have thinned the ranks and only five remain. Constantly the mother and small ones must be upon the alert, their lives always in danger. Even out here in the wild is this constant struggle for life and happiness.

My friend, Frank Markey, has contributed a radio this year, so that now we are no longer isolated from the rest of the world. Within a few days' time we have heard music from San Francisco, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and other cities. We heard the Democrats in Chicago fight out their platform and name their candidates for the presidency of the United States. And just a few days ago we heard the King of England talk, and several of the great leaders over there.

But mostly this is just a place of rest and peace—a haven of homely beauty, unspoiled and as wild as it was a hundred years or so ago.

We usually awake with the rising of the sun in the morning, take our plunge into the cool waters of the lake and then breakfast. From then on the day is one of choice. There is always something useful to do. But mostly "Weskawenak" is for resting the body and renewing the soul. Sick minds recover very rapidly here!

Screen's Newest Exotic, Sari Maritza, Reared In Scenes Of Chinese Romance

Tientsin, China (AP).—This city of her birth knows better than any other the family background of beauty and brains which Sari Maritza, new blond exotic of the films, has brought to her career in Hollywood.

Tientsin knew her as a child, when she lived in a castle, the daughter of one of China's most famous foreign families.

In Hollywood Sari Maritza's path to stardom is being laid carefully with good featured roles, and in five months there she has appeared in but two pictures—and not as star but as a featured player.

She is not to be entrusted upon the screen as a star at once, as has been the fate of many beauties of equal promise who became, in consequence, mere "flashes-in-the-pan," her friends here learn. But stardom is definitely in the studio's plans for her.

Lived in Moated Castle
Sari was born here on St. Patrick's day 20 years ago. Her career is romantic enough, but anybody who pictures her as a child haunting the narrow alleyways of Chinese towns and frolicking with Chinese children would be far wrong.

Much of her young life was spent in the great castellated castle, surrounded by a moat, which overlooks the Tientsin racetrack.

This castle was built by her grandfather, the famous von Detring, counselor of the great Li Hungchang. If Marquis Li was the power behind the throne in China, von Detring was the power behind the marquis, and the only man ever considered a possible rival to the celebrated Sir Robert Hart, autocrat of the Chinese Customs.

A Famous Wedding

It was through von Detring's influence that the Chinese Engineering and Mining company obtained its concession, and this connection was maintained when Major Walter Nathan, head of the mining company in Aientin, married one of Detring's daughters. Sari Maritza in real life is Patricia Nathan.

Her English father is one of five notably successful brothers. One of them is Sir Matthew Nathan, former governor of Queensland; another Colonel Sir Frederick Nathan, once an important figure in India.

Brains and Beauty

The Detring-Nathan marriage was one of the most notable alliances of brains and beauty in the history of the foreign communities of North China.

Sari Maritza's grandmother, Madame Detring, was famed for her wit and loveliness. An aristocrat to her fingertips, she came of an old Viennese family and was greatly beloved in Tientsin.

She was still a woman of surpassing beauty, despite her years, when she sadly bade farewell to Tientsin a few years ago and left her picturesque castle for Europe.

a brunette, inherited the beauty of their mother and grandmother.

Famed As Swimmer

Of Sari's varied accomplishments, that which lingers most in the memory of old residents here is her aquatic skill. There was nobody in these parts, they say, to compete with her as a diver. She acquired her skill at the seaside resort of Petaiho, where her family also had a palatial residence.

Sari's former governess, a Scots-woman, is still a resident of Tientsin, proud of the progress of her former charge. The bane of Sari's life as a child, "she recalls, was her mass of long, fair curls, but Sari cried when these were cut off at school.

Legislators Hear About Hitler's Pay

Brunswick, Germany (AP).—"What is Adolf Hitler doing to earn his salary?" was asked by an inquisitive socialist member of the Brunswick diet.

The Austrian-born fascist chief, it will be recalled, became a German citizen through being appointed "regierungsrat," or "government counselor" at the Brunswick legation in Berlin, with "economic duties". His first act after being appointed was to apply for a vacation.

So, when the questioner asked whether Hitler was doing any work for his money, and if not, why not, a spokesman for the Brunswick government blandly replied: "Regierungsrat Hitler's work was so arranged that he could do political work as well."

The spokesman sat down. Nobody laughed.

Engagement Denied

There were Hollywood reports of an engagement between Nanci Lyon (above), 18-year-old Los Angeles girl, and Harry Bannister, former husband of Ann Harding, but Bannister denied them.

FOIL WEEDS BY PAVING THE GARDEN

Arlington, Va. (AP).—Paving may be better than plowing for your backyard garden.

Growing vegetables in "cracks" in a garden pavement is the latest experimental idea of the department of agriculture. It may have been inspired by the persistence of grass that grows up through the cracks of old brick and cement sidewalks.

The garden "pavement" is really a mulch made of concrete blocks, an extension of the old paper mulch idea. A mulch covers all the surface of the soil except the space where the crops are grown.

Other mulches of iron, cinders, zinc and aluminum are being tried. The experiment still is in its infancy, but in tests so far beans, peas, strawberries and other small fruits have grown as well with the permanent "pavement" mulch as with ordinary cultivation.

The concrete mulch consists of blocks a few inches thick and nine to 12 inches wide, which cover the ground, with open spaces between them one and one-half inches in width.

The permanent mulch controls weeds and conserves moisture. It also warms the soil earlier in the spring and keeps it warm longer in the fall because the blocks absorb the heat of the sun. Rain enters the ground along the rows between the blocks.

The blocks made of cinders are covered with asphalt to make them black, so that they will absorb as much heat as possible, and blocks made of other materials are painted black for the same purpose. Government scientists believe the "pavement" will have no ill effects on the soil.

NEW EVENING CLOTHES TRIMMED WITH FRINGE

Paris (AP).—Fringe decks some of the newest evening clothes. One short wrap of white crepe is banded with three rows of dark blue fringe applied on the diagonal, while a frock of dull white crepe has red, white and dark blue fringe about three inches wide running on a diagonal line from the bodice to the skirt.

Beach mining at Nome, which produced several million dollars' worth of gold in the rush of 1898, is being revived.

New Books

By John Selby

New York—There is one unquestionably first rate book to be read by readers whose taste withstands the heat of July. It is T. S. Stripling's "The Store," second of the trilogy in which the author plans to reflect the history and life of the south from pre-war days to the present.

Nearly everything about "The Store" is admirable, even its leisurely, southern stride, which is ideal for the presentation of such peculiarly southern truths as those clustering about the south at the time of Cleveland's first administration.

Stripling's sympathy and knowledge are made effective by his balance; his characterization is facile, but it "sticks." What Galsworthy does for his one class, the most English of the British, Stripling does with two different races.

The story is that of Col. Miltiades Valden, his tragic rise and tragic fall, and to it everything drapes. But this necessary bias does not warp the portals of the dozens touched by the colonel's curious ambition.

Scalping Englishmen

Frances Crane, who scalps people for the magazines regularly, now does the same for those unfortunate Englishmen it is impossible not to know. She calls her gay little farce "The Tennessee Poppy, or Which-way Westminster Abbey," which is all one needs know.

Equally to the point are the week's two "Grand Hotel" books, the better of them being Anthony Bertram's "They Came to the Castle."

Bertram gathers up a trio of the vulgar Americans beloved by British writers and a group of vacationing British, and shuts them up in a castle with two countesses and a crazy count. There is almost no plot; one is scarcely needed. But the book is excellent fun.

Nor is Ishbel Ross' "Promenade Deck" dull. This writer makes a liner on a world cruise her Grand Hotel, a very good setting indeed.

Guest Room Books

Do you desire water wings for your horse? A device for shaping your lips? A contrivance for irrigating by firing ice cubes into the ground? "Beware of Imitations," by the Messrs. Brown and Jefferott, is a collection of these and other bright contrivances from the Patent Office files.

Are you musical? Read "Trombones" and snicker at some really funny musical jokes. Do you fancy epitaphs? In "The Last Word" Homer Croy has collected dozens.

Although putting these books in the guest room may run up the light bill—

Pheasant "Crop" Should Be Large

Sportsmen may expect a big "crop" of ringnecked pheasants according to game commission officials who said that the propagation of these birds will reach an exceptionally high peak this year. At the three state game farms 101,952 pheasant eggs, 3207 bob-white quail eggs, and 1810 wild turkey eggs have been produced.

Of these, 9805 pheasant eggs have been distributed to refuge keepers, 10,799 to game protectors, and 45,353 to sportsmen. The last includes 8000 eggs shipped to State college for experimental purposes. Surplus chicks from these, except for a few sent to the Fisher game farm, will be distributed to sportsmen's organizations who are equipped with brooders for raising the birds to a satisfactory age for release.

Thirty-two thousand, six hundred and sixty pheasant eggs and all turkey and quail eggs except those found unfit have been set at the farms.

Professors Unable To "Hold" Gridmen

Columbus, Ohio (AP).—Ohio State university's 1932 football eleven already has demonstrated its prowess by plunging through the professors' final examinations line to a touchdown.

Only two regulars, a guard and a center, and one frosh lineman were off their feet during the play and only one frosh forward was knocked completely out. Head Coach Sam Williamson reported after final examinations.

The two regulars and the yearling lineman will have a chance to become eligible in the summer term.

With little trouble in prospect because of ineligibility, Williamson's chief task is in finding a pair of tackles to replace last year's Bell and Haubrich.

Deibler Warns Of Laws On Fishing

With the Pennsylvania fishing season now in full swing, Fish Commissioner Oliver M. Weibler issued the following reminders on fishing regulations:

It is unlawful—
To fish for any species of fish, or with any device, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday;

For anyone, male or female, over 16 years old, to fish without a fishing license;

To use any devices for taking fish, frogs, tadpoles, terrapins, or turtles except those provided by law;

To use poisons or explosives (penalty $100).

For any unmatured foreign-born resident to fish in any of the waters of this commonwealth or the waters bounding it;

To draw off any water without a permit from the board of fish commissioners.

SLEEPERS LIKE CENTRAL PARK

New York City Playground
Resembles Fighting Field
In Early Morn.

By William Gaines

New York.—Walk through Central park about 7:30 or 8 these mornings and you will see many of the homeless unemployed and professional idlers still sprawled out on benches or the grass, not yet roused by the sunshine of another figuratively sunless day.

I managed to make the early trek recently. A girl who lives near the park has been taking brisk morning walks around the reservoir for years. She insisted that I join her and a couple of others for a hike when we accused her of exaggeration. She said Central park in the early morning looked like a field of fierce battling, so many men were stretched upon the ground.

She was right. Our informant observes that the park snoozers are, in general, better looking men than they used to be. Some of them appear as if out-of-door slumbering were an entirely new experience for them.

The morning we walked with her we came upon a grayed woman asleep on one of the benches. Nearby a group of sleek equestrians from Park avenue passed, returning from their early morning gallop.

Swim to be Slim

Swim to keep slender, girls, and you can eat anything you want, says Johnny Weissmuller.

"I can eat chop suey until it comes out of my ears and it won't hurt me," Johnny told me. His 6 foot, 3 is well set up with 195 pounds of brawn. There's no fat to him.

Johnny has great faith in the general corrective effects of swimming. When he was a youngster he wasn't such a good physical specimen. He wasn't sickly, but he wasn't well developed. He took to the water after a doctor advised plenty of exercise of some sort.

"I was long, like a weed in those days," he recalled. Wherever Johnny is, whatever he is doing, he seeks out a pool and takes his daily plunge.

"If you're too skinny, you can build yourself up by swimming, as easily as you can take fat off," says this enthusiast. "You won't need anything else."

Soap Box To Opera

Suzanne Keener, concert singer, jumped from a soap box on a street corner in Pittsburgh to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera house—and performed that feat in eight months.

It was during the World war that Suzanne, then in her teens, was enlisted to sell bonds. She was stationed on a soap box and raised her singing voice above the roar of the street to attract purchasers.

A woman—a good judge of young talent—heard Suzanne and made it possible for her to come to New York to study.

One morning she sang at a recital of a musical club at which DeLuca and Gigli were present. They asked to meet Suzanne and subsequently introduced her to Gatti Casazza, monarch of the Met. An audition followed, and a contract for three years.

Suzanne achieved fair success with the Metropolitan. Of later years she has been doing concert work.

When a storm struck Floydada, Texas, a piece of canvas was driven through the limb of a tree.

The drawings are made for the minute movie. Use reduction. Use 300 pen for drawing and 170 for printing. Draw on a smooth surface. Bristol board art store can supply you.

Point write your scenarios in story form. Make skeleton outline of plot trying always to condense as much as possible.

Thanks for the nice letter. Your "MINUTE MOVIE" was very entertaining. Glad to know you are such a fan.

Your drawings show a good deal of natural ability but are too sketchy. Study the way various cartoonists get their effects.

4 WOMEN FACE
TENSE MONTHS OF CAMPAIGN

Results Of Election In November Decides White House Occupants.

By Bess Furman

Washington (AP).—The four months of July, August, September and October will be highlighted and tense for four women of national interest—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, Mrs. Dolly Gann and Mrs. John N. Garner.

November's second Tuesday will tell which two, Hoover-Gann or Roosevelt-Garner, will be the center of Washington's official social life for the next four years.

Individually they are about as contrasting a foursome as could be found. Together they typify American life. And whether they sit at home or circulate when the campaign comes, each will be a factor in presidential and vice-presidential fortunes.

Mrs. Hoover a Cosmopolitan
Lou Henry Hoover, whose campaign setting probably will be the south portico of the White House and Camp Rapidan is the cosmopolitan. Born in Iowa to memories of rail fences and fresh-turned furrows, she has lived in China, London, California, and Washington, D. C. Into her hospitable home the hundreds daily pour.

Press-shy, Mrs. Hoover has provided comparatively little copy to reporters during her regime, but perhaps no other White House mistress has piled up such an individual acquaintance through a staggering "sum total" of guests. Her hostess gift is as distinctive as her shimmering, white hair.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, active in the arena in behalf of her husband, is the "born aristocrat" if America has any such to offer. First cousin of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, the "princess Alice" of Rooseveltian days in the White House, Mrs. Roosevelt has the same slim, straight grace of bearing, the same social ease.

Being aristocratic, she can also be as democratic as she chooses, gathering women reporters about her in a close little circle for intimate talks about her girls' school and her furniture factory and the traditions she considers worth keeping in the White House.

Mrs. Dolly Gann, gorgeously-gowned Kansan, a political campaigner in her own right as well as social hostess for her brother, Vice-President Curtis, is regarded as certain to play a prominent part in the campaign. She might be termed the "success story" type of American, rising to prominence and power side by side with her half brother who was born on an Indian reservation.

Mrs. Garner, bobbed-haired and deep-dimpled typifies for many the simplicity that still survives in American life. Her heart is centered in her husband and in her Uvalde, Texas home.

TRAVERS STILL GOOD PUTTER

Golfer Achieves Result With Natural, Easy Stance
On Greens.

The years and a long absence from competition have not affected the skill of Jerome Dunstan Travers on the green. He is still one of the best putters in golf and he still uses a center-shafted aluminum-headed putter that he has now had for 28 years.

I watched Travers give a great exhibition of his short game, paired with Johnny Farrell, in an exhibition match during a pouring rain at the North Hempstead Country club on Long Island. He got two long ones down on the first nine for birdies on surfaces that were soon slowed up by the water.

"You will notice," he replied to one of my questions, "that I do not attempt to anchor either arm in taking my putting stance. The arms are free, giving me an easy pendulum motion. I simply take a natural, easy stance on the greens and let my comfortable stroke do the rest."

"Of course putting takes a lot of practice, just like any other shot in golf. Give the ball a chance, too. It's better to be two feet past the cup on the approach putt than that much short."

Mowry Mops Up

Scout Vessels reports that Joe Mowry, the sensational young Minneapolis outfielder, is all that the boys are busily touting him to be in the American association's upper flight of ball players.

After a slump that shot 40 points away from his batting average in a week's time, Mowry came back with another batting blast, collecting 12 hits in two double-headers. He's been hitting close to 400 all spring.

Only 21 and just a years out of the University of Iowa, Mowry moved into double-A company this year after spending the latter part of last season with Nashville in the Southern association.

His manager, Donie Bush, considered the youngster one of the greatest prospects he has ever handled. The bidding for his services is reported to be little short of frenzied.

Hurdles Best In Years

The hurdling race in the century should take place in the final American track and field tryouts at Palo

Alto, in mid-July, with an encore in the Olympics at Los Angeles a few weeks later.

This country has had some great timber toppers but never at one time anything to compare with the present recordbreaking trio of high hurdlers—

1. Percy Beard, national champion, who set a new American record of 14.2 seconds last year, bettering the official world mark by two-tenths, and has lately been romping over the sticks easily in 14.4 for the 120-yard distance.

2. Jack Keller of Ohio State, Big Ten titleholder, who flew the route in 14 seconds flat, with the wind, this spring.

THEY'LL SPLASH FOR UNCLE SAM AT OLYMPICS

This trio of water sprites won the right to represent the United States in the Olympic games at Los Angeles. They are shown after they qualified in Olympic trials in New York. Left to right: Helene Madison of Seattle, winner of the 100-meter free style event; Katherine Rawls, 14, of Miami Beach, Fla., who edged out Georgia Coleman for first place in the spring-board dive, and Margaret Hoffman, of Kingston, Pa., winner of the 200-meter breast stroke. Woodrow Wilson Helped Nominee In Public Career

A young state senator from New York went to the democratic national convention in 1912 an avowed and determined advocate of Woodrow Wilson. Could a college professor become president? The young solon was convinced he could.

So the youthful legislator went to work for Wilson, one of the original so-called Wilson democrats. He was Franklin D. Roosevelt, now democratic presidential nominee.

Working in the convention, and later, in campaigning for Wilson, probably his mind did not carry him to the dream that he too might aspire to the presidency.

Woodrow Wilson, perhaps with a little thought of the ultimate ca-

There's Fascination In Movie "Labs"; Producing Flawless Film Their Task

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Film fame, ever dying faster than it is born, lives on in strange places.

In a film laboratory where they test developing processes, there are strips of film containing long close-ups of a fair maiden with flowing black tresses and a plaintive smile. Her face is known to all the laboratory workers. But asked who she reer of that young man, gave the push that placed Roosevelt before the public eye, from which he has never disappeared. Wilson rewarded his helper with the suggestion to Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels that Roosevelt would make Daniels a good assistant.

Roosevelt accordingly became assistant secretary of the navy, gained fame in that position. He tried for the United States senatorship from New York, with Wilson's approval, but was beaten. Nonetheless, the reputation he made for himself as secretary was not forgotten.

In 1920 he found himself democratic vice presidential candidate, running with James Cox on a Wilson platform. Wilson became ill, but his force permeated the party, and Cox and Roosevelt carried the Wilson doctrine to the nation.

No one knows exactly what influence Wilson had on his party's candidates. A story has been told that both were called to him, listened to his plea for international cooperation, went out through the country almost with the zeal of fanatics to carry out the Wilson ideals.

They failed in the election, but both Cox and Roosevelt often have spoken of the impress that Wilson made on them.

DOUBLE-HEADERS SPELL BAD NEWS FOR GIANTS

New York (AP)—Double-headers may be a bargain to customers but to New York's hapless Giants they are just a double dose of bad news.

In the first nine bargain bills played by the club this year, a clean sweep was made of only one. Three were lost and in five the Giants obtained an even break.

The ninth double-header of the season, dropped to the Cincinnati Reds, resulted in Manager Bill Terry's "sad young men of Manhattan" sagging into the National league cellar.

is, none can tell.

"She came out here about ten years ago and never did anything. Nobody knows her name."

Unknown, but day after day through years, her smile is revealed in the dim interior of the laboratory. They don't need new film for such tests. And by now, after so many years, they scarcely notice that girl's face. Still, if it's any consolation to the girl "who never did anything," her smile has become an infinitesimal cog in the complicated industry that repulsed her.

Fascinating Work

In many respects the laboratory, seldom noted by studio visitors, is the most fascinating section of the film plant. Here it is that the movies' industrial side is foremost. Its purpose is to turn out film, perfected film, as a factory produces shoes or buttons or pins.

Within its walls is the high romance of machinery, of smoothly humming motors and mysterious chemicals at work, piling the fictional heart-throbs of actors and the synthetic adventures of movie heroes.

To the workers there it is a matter of small concern that on these endless strips of celluloid they control are pictured tales that will stir the dreams, the mirth, the pity of millions.

Their job is to produce a roll of film that will be without mechanical flaw, that will reveal to best advantage whatever is captured on the celluloid when it comes to them from the cameras. What the camera captures is no concern of theirs.

See Only The Film

Film printers in the eerie dimness of a room in which tiny bulbs break the darkness only with a faint reddish glow sit hour by hour, under their eyes passing the fervent love passages of Clark Gable and Norma Shearer, or the comic pathos of Marie Dressler; at noon they emerge into the dazzling outer world, only to return again to the inner darkness until evening. Their eyes see film, not the players on it.

Modern improvements have "cleaned up" the film developing process considerably, speeded it, but have made it none the less amazing. Nor have they taken it all out of the dark rooms of old.
